Headline:
Patchy rain today. Showers tomorrow. Very mild by midweek.

Today:
Dry and mostly cloudy this morning, ahead of some patchy rain erratically moving east across the region this afternoon. Maybe some late brightness for the Peak District. Another mild and breezy day. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Tonight:
Evening cloud and patchy rain across eastern areas soon clearing to leave mostly dry conditions, with clear spells across the region overnight. The odd shower possible in the west. Minimum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Monday:
A bright start for many, before a scattering of showers develop by lunchtime, with perhaps a few heavier ones for a time during the afternoon. Still breezy and mild. Maximum temperature 15 deg C (59 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Largely dry through the midweek period with bright or sunny spells interspersed with cloudier spells. Windy on Wednesday and Thursday, but very mild by day and overnight.
